E.A.U. Guidelines

The purpose of a guideline is not to be prescriptive in the way clinicians should treat their patient, but rather to give access to the best contemporaneous consensus view on the most appropriate management available. In order to produce these EAU guidelines for urology, a number of specialist committees were established, each with a Chairman recognized to be an international expert in his particular field. The committees were tasked with performing extensive literature reviews, and publications were ranked based on the scientific exactitude of the study.
